He slept there, on the ground. At sunrise he got up and walked by the high road over to Re Albi..Grove they were all of one kind, which grew nowhere else, yet had no name in Hardic but "tree" In.What they had they shared. "Why do we quarrel?" he said rather despondently..her timbers creaked a little, a slaves chain rattled, rattled again..there is no doubt of that: "The womb of the Mother lies under Samory." "Dark is bad," said the Patterner. "Eh?". A while after that he left Pendor, drawn southward again, and maybe went to Ensmer. In one guise or another he came at last to Geath in the Ninety Isles..When he came to himself, sick and weak from the poison and with an aching skull, he was in a room.and restored him his strength. The Herbal used all his art, but could not rouse him. "He is dead," he said. "The breath will not leave him, but he is dead." So we mourned him. Then, because here was dismay among us, and all my patterns spoke of change and danger, we met to choose a new Warden of Roke, an Archmage to guide us. And in our council we set the young king in the Summoner's place. To us it seemed right that he should sit among us. But there are true changes, and true summonings..He was glad to see the sorcerer uneasy too, standing by the helmsman, keeping a watch up on the masthead, taking in sail at the hint of a west wind. But the wind held steady from the north. A thunder-squall came pelting on that wind, and Ivory went down to the cabin, but Dragonfly stayed up on deck. She was afraid of the water, she had told him. She could not swim; she said, "Drowning must be a horrible thing - not to breathe the air." She had shuddered at the thought. It was the only fear she had ever shown of anything. But she disliked the low, cramped cabin, and had stayed on deck every day and slept there on the warm nights. Ivory had not tried to coax her into the cabin. He knew now that coaxing was no good. To have her he must master her; and that he would do, if only they could come to Roke.
